La Reata

Foreword

In this hectic era of madness, the publication of a yearbook could only result in the firm belief that it could be done. For converging upon us is the threat to all our ideals, to all our hopes, to all our lives. Only by the application of sustained knowledge can we preserve our heritage, and the foregoing pages of LA REATA present the fragmentary moments of the things we are fighting for.

That We Might Freely Live

Dedication

To Mr. J. R. Clarke, esteemed and devoted faculty member who, imbued with the spirit and ideals of higher education, has sought tirelessly and patiently by example and precept, to convey to each passing generation the importance of achievement. Mr. Clarke has earned the trust and respect of all who have worked with him.

On Leave

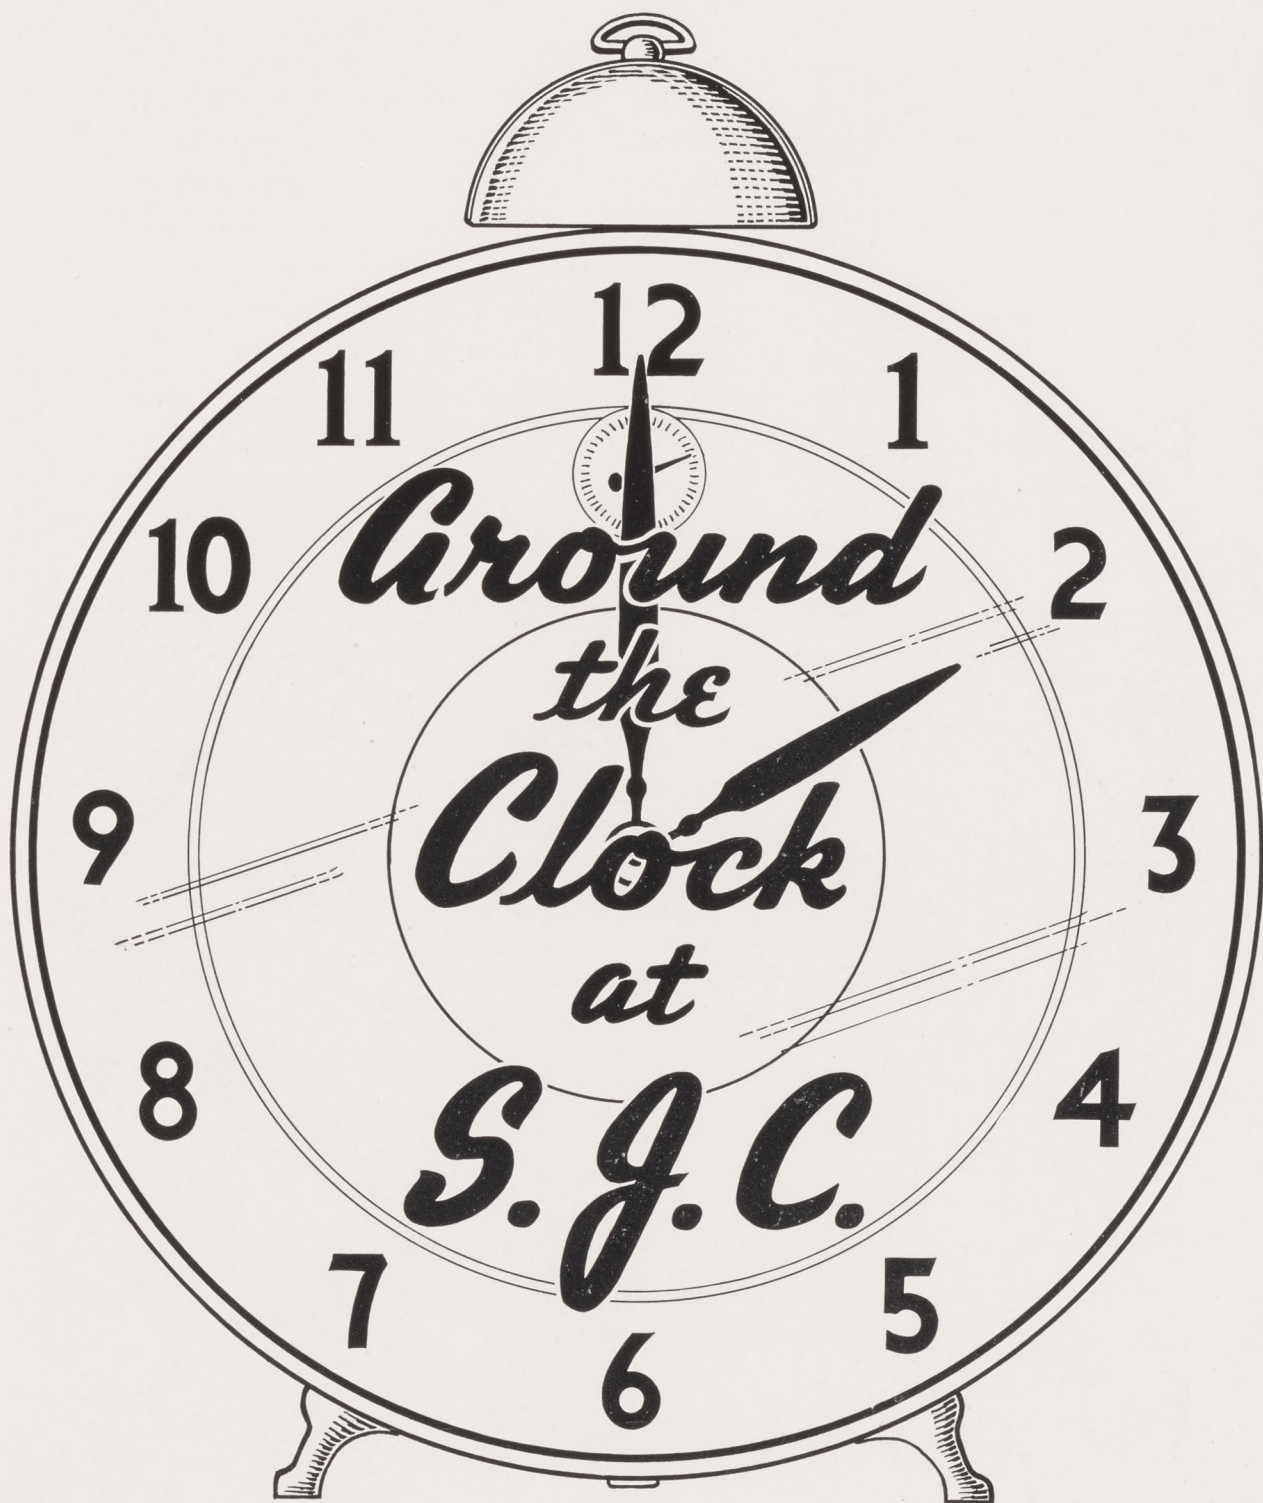

Exerting its priority over faculty as well as student body, the war machine early claimed five of our instructors and our president. These men matched the exodus of students from the campus to the camps with their own migration from professorships in the esjaysee classrooms to positions of leadership in military groups. Reluctant to leave yet not the less glad to go, these officers of the United States armed forces fully realized the impact of Major Werner's epitome, "Until we win, little else matters; unless we win, nothing else matters."

ADMINISTRATION

President

EARL SAUBLE

Earl F. Sauble succeeded a man difficult to succeed. Former Dean of the College, Mr. Sauble worked in close harmony with organizational procedure. His present administration, fraught with the uncertainties attendant on college education, has been marked with stability and progress. With a background of skilled training, with an understanding and appreciation of student life, with a profound and unswerving sense of justice, Mr. Sauble effectively combines the qualities of initiative, diplomacy, and leadership.

In Appreciation

JOHN B. LEMOS

LUELLA HALL

Of John B. Lemos and Luella Hall, able and understanding counselors, whose service to the college is one of distinction. Their task never easy has been doubly difficult this year, faced as they have been with marshaling the energies and the enthusiasms of students toward the requisite training for winning the war and maintaining the peace.

Superintendent

School Administration

Despite the uncertainty of some phases of higher education, its existence remains preeminent in the minds of the personnel of the board of trustees. Unceasingly on the alert against pressure groups which would temporarily change the purposes of the college, the school board has remained our true champion. Dr. R. D. Case, secretary to the board and superintendent of the union district, supervises with sincerity and interest the varied activities of our school. As these men oversee our mental well-being so do the custodians oversee our physical well-being by providing us with attractively kept campuses and halls and protecting our safety.

Associated Students

ROSS SMITH, President

Under the handicap of "c'est la guerre" that is affecting our entire generation, the 1943 Commission of the Associated Students of Salinas Junior College has upheld with unprecedented perseverance our standards and our traditions. The main duty of the student administrative board is to set the policies governing activities. At best an arduous job, this year the decisions necessitated by changing economic, social and educational status encompassed a far broader field than has been previously experienced by Salinas' student administrators. Selected by the student body for ability and sagacity in their particular fields, the members of the commission are a concentrate of Salinas Junior College life and energy; they are the nucleus of campus animation.

This year, taking over double teaching responsibilities, the Salinas Junior College faculty have had to readjust themselves to meet telling labor shortage demands. Not only are they meeting these demands but they are re-arranging their teaching program to aid the students in forming a correct war psychology. Thus, they are equipping us academically and inspirationally, so that our educational system will not weaken nor fall into the hungry claws of our enemies.

Chosen as the two most scholastically representative students of the 1943 graduating class, Jeff Schmidt and Carol Duer were so selected because of the prowess that they have shown in their every academic and extra-curricular attempt. Also of conspicuous achievement are those who excell in leadership, character, scholarship, and citizenship. Designated for this award sponsored by the American Legion were Clara Mae Page and Bill Gruber. Alongside these students are the many who are potential "Graduates of Distinction."

VICTORY SONG

Words and Music by LORELL McCANN

Ra-ta-ta-ta our V for Victory
Signals a challenge to the foe.
Free men are marching by
Others are flying high
Eager to give their all
That freedom shall not die.
Ra-ta-ta-ta our signal flashes clear
To other people all around the world.
Free men have now begun
To set the rising sun
Ra-ta-ta-taaa Ra-ta-ta-taaa
Ra-ta-ta-taaa Ra-ta-ta-taaa

Pray for the peace to come.
Pray for the right to worship as you
please.
Pray for humanity
And for the time we share the World's necessities.
Fight for the cause of right
And for the common dignity of man.
Traitors beware, traitors beware
Free men are fighting now in every land.

Ra-ta-ta-ta our V for Victory
Signals a challenge to the foe.
Free men are marching by
Others are flying high
Eager to give their all
That freedom shall not die.
Ra-ta-ta-ta our signal flashes clear
To people all around the world.
Soon we will make them free
From fascist tyranny
United Nations fight for Freedom of the world.
Pray for the peace to come.
Pray for the right to worship as you
please.
Pray for humanity
And for the time we share the World's necessities.
Fight for the cause of right
And for the common dignity of man.
Freedom for all, both great and small
Freedom to live is what we're fighting for.

DON McDERMID AND CLYDE DOWNEY

The Rally Committee was a small but potent group whose main activity was to promote spirit and enthusiasm during the football season, but their interests did not stop there. Faced with the universal problem of war, the Committee admirably coped with the situation, staged weekly rallies and provided two energetic cheer leaders, Don McDermid and Clyde Downey, who along with the "Three V's" stimulated the student masses.

Realizing that "the show must go on" this year's drama classes not only complied with government wishes that school activities retain their high pre-war level but surpassed all expectations by presenting a season of pageants, comedies, and solo performances. Available material was some of the best dramatic talent ever to tread the boards of the little theater. Spot-lighted productions were the Christmas and Washington Day programs and the spring play, "Out of the Fry-ing Pan."

CECILIA CONRADO, Editor

In spite of an abundance of exacting circumstances due to the scarcity of staff members, the dearth of skilled technicians, and the perturbing lack of sufficient materials needed to produce the desired publication, the LA REATA staff of 1942-43 were able to give their fellow students one of the few yearbooks published by a junior college on the Pacific coast . . . in this, the first school year of "World War Number Two." Members of the staff under the competent guidance of Editor Cecilia Conrado are as follows: Martha Rudd, Dorothy Owens, Harold Watts, Harold Coehlo, Constance Lamont, Frances Nelson, Ellis Langley, Bob Scrivani, and Ted Duer, special art consultant.

DOROTHY OWENS, MARTHA RUDD, MR. BOROUGH, CONNIE LAMONT, HAL WATTS,

Panther Sentinel

Overcoming the obstacles of printing difficulties, reduced size, newsprint, rationing, decreased staff and initiation of new quarters, the Salinas Junior College weekly publication was launched this year under a new flag, the PANTHER SENTINEL. Formerly the BATTERY, the PANTHER SENTINEL edited by Don Barsotti continued presenting the news of the campus, until he was called into active service, at which time Martha Rudd took over the editorial leadership. Outstanding in the class were as follows: Dorothy Owens, Cecilia Conrado, Frances Nelson, and Billie Lee.

Signal Corps

Established on the campus for the greater part of the term were three large classes of men training for the Army Signal Corps. The classes made use of our government approved facilities and were under the tutorage of our technical instructors—Messrs. Bullis, Anderson, Monday, and Smith. It was an honor for our campus to be selected by the army as a suitable place for their training base. Many of the boys who enlisted in this program were former Salinas Junior College students. Graduates from this corps will defend their country in the role of reconnaissance.

Bond Drive

Extending their war stamp and bond selling activities from our campus to the Salinas Army Air Base these representative Salinas Junior College women in a one day drive at that station boosted the sales within the vicinity of a four figure mark. The girls who participated in the Air Base sale took part also in the club-sponsored Victory Days at the college. Interest in this movement was stimulated on the campus by the forceful editorial tactics of the Panther press.

Soph Show

The inspirational masterpiece that was the '42 soph show surpassed all its traditional predecessors in cast, content, and comedy value. The thunderous applause and uproarious laughter that were the audience's reception of the laugh riot were measuring sticks which determined the success of the show. Presented yearly for the entertainment of the student body, the superior quality of this class' production was the result of the master touch of director, Beverly Van Buren, and the outstanding ability of the players.

Surmounting seemingly impossible situations, Wes Hammond and his social activities committee have merited the praise received from all quarters by maintaining a spirited social program throughout the entire term. It was their problem to arrange the social calendar for a year of orientation to new situations and new difficulties. Coping with adverse conditions, primarily transportation and budget, they presented a "White Christmas" Winter Ball that surpassed dance delights of less trying years.

Field Day—the thrill of the race over wall and stream—the tug of war mixed with mire and mud—and then the supper, fit for a king, for kings and their ladies were there: kings of the Salinas Junior College campus who, under the leadership of Hal Coehlo, had made all of this possible.

A nondenominational society, the Westminster Club was formed to serve the Protestant students of the Salinas Junior College. During periodical gatherings they pursue problems, ideologies, and philosophies from a social and ethical aspect. Meetings were often enhanced by the presence of outside speakers.

Theta Epsilon Gamma

The Theta Epsilon Gamma society founded in 1942 by former Panther Sentinel editor, Frank McMillan, was organized this year for the first time as an active group. This journalistic society was founded for the sole purpose of exploiting the oft-repeated quotation, "The pen is mightier than the sword."

Salinas Junior College put a small but powerful wartime team on the field this year, and enjoyed a moderately successful season. The first team had little to worry about in regard to positions with one exception. Bob Steele and Hank McMasters had to work hard to keep ahead of Bobby Campbell and Tommy Freeman. The turnout was small but the spirit was great, and when the Cal Poly and Sacramento games were over there could be no doubt as to how good a fighting spirit there really was. There will be future teams and bigger ones, but the Junior College football team of 1942 typifies the spirit of grit and fight that will win this war. Irregardless of the heavy odds, the Panthers scored triumphs over Visalia and San Francisco State and gained a hard fought tie with Compton Junior College.

Owing to the shortage of college competition, the games of the season were successfully played against the military. Carrying on the best Panther tradition, Salinas Junior College track stalwarts participated in a varied "43" schedule. Outstanding in early competition were Martinison and Hiserman, who ably took care of the sprint, hurdles, and broadjump. Stivers, Kenealy, Seeley, and Schmidt aided in giving the Panthers a well rounded point-winning aggregation.

Baseball

A small but enthusiastic squad reported for initial practice. However, the rains and conflicting academic schedules prevented regular practice. Nevertheless, the team played a limited schedule against nearby service teams. The following boys made up the 1943 edition of the Salinas Junior College roster: Perez, Rettig, Stivers, Verutti, Gabriel, Hawkins, Jacoby, Choisser, Garnero, and McDermid.

Despite the proverbial shadow of the draft lurking over the heads of Salinas Junior College men, the "43" golf team was a logical nominee for the sports "Hall of Fame." Outstanding members of the team were as follows: Smith, Verutti, Steele, Wilson, Perez, Conradi, Gabriel, Seeley.

Tennis

Bottom row: HAWKINS, STROH, TERRY.

This year's tennis team upheld the prestige of the Junior College by showing skill and ability. Trekking to neighboring communities, the team met their opponents with confidence and composure. The members of the team who were responsible for a successful season were Condon, Franco, Terry, Hawkins, Gruber, Tosta, Stivers, Coy.

Riding

For three hours each Friday the riding class composed of Sturla, Rowe, Scrivani, Crane, and Wilabe, accompanied by Mrs. John Murrin, explored the trails of the old Spanish rancheros. Quixotic enough transportation to and from the Uhl ranch, the point of equestrian take-off, was by motor.

Women's Sports

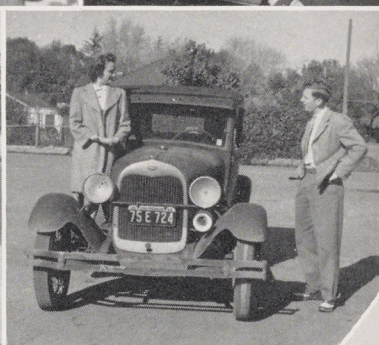

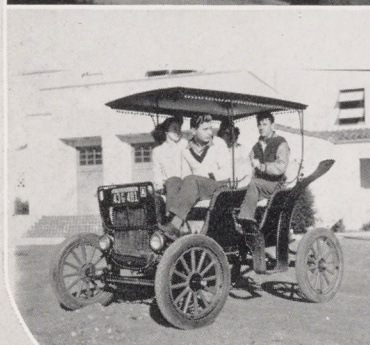

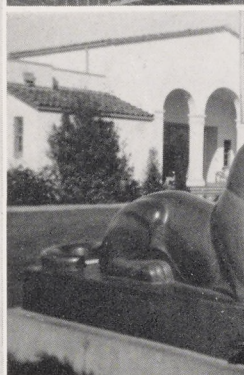

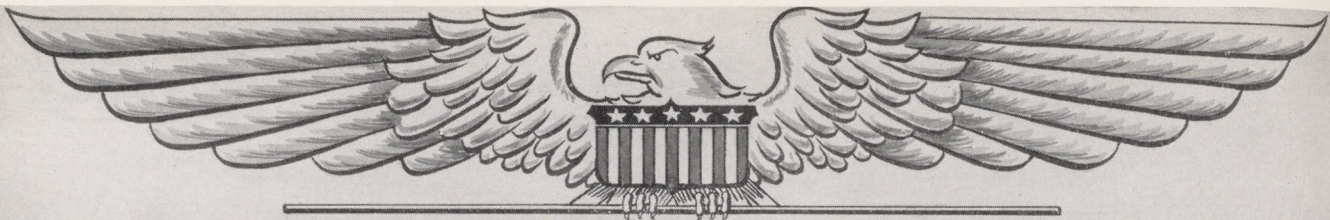

A skills class, new last semester, in women's sports included bowling, golf, badminton, and archery. Archery classes entered contests conducted by the Los Angeles Junior College. Calisthenic classes, also a new group, practiced to achieve perfection in marching tactics. Of great interest was the basketball tournament in which all girls participated.
